As a client of ours on other projects, LKPR were asked by Beech Demolition, part of the Beech Group, to survey a recently purchased site, Southport Pleasure Land, that they believed may have Japanese Knotweed. The uncertainty over the presence of Japanese Knotweed was holding up the demolition of the site in-case the Japanese Knotweed was inadvertently spread.

LKPR sent an experienced surveyor to the site and within a day was able to satisfactorily declare the site free of Japanese Knotweed. This allowed Beech Demolition to proceed with their proposed plans on schedule.
